Vomiting and diarrhea are common symptoms of aflatoxin poisoning in humans and animals. Aflatoxin is a potent liver carcinogen and can cause liver failure. It is produced by certain molds, including Aspergillus and Fusarium, which can grow on crops such as corn, soybeans, and peanuts. Aflatoxin can also be found in other foods, such as wheat, rice, and cottonseed. If you suspect your crop is contaminated with aflatoxin, you should contact your local agricultural extension office for testing and guidance.
